Overview

Stephanie focuses her practice on commercial and complex civil litigation handling a wide variety of business and commercial disputes. She has represented clients in litigated matters involving contracts, consumer-oriented class actions, unfair competition, restrictive covenants, shareholder disputes, and business torts. Stephanie has also represented clients in appellate matters before all levels of both state and federal appellate courts. She has considerable experience in all stages of such litigation and appellate practice.

Combining creative advocacy with a pragmatic approach, Stephanie provides effective and efficient solutions. Clients appreciate her attention to detail and ability to perceive the broader perspective.

Prior to entering private practice, Stephanie served as a law clerk to the Honorable Robert J. Gilson of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division, as well as a pro bono attorney to the Honorable Michael A. Shipp of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. While in law school, she was an Associate Editor for the Rutgers Race & the Law Review, and a Research Assistant to Professor Douglas S. Eakeley, where her work aided in the formation of The Rutgers Center for Corporate Law and Governance.
